

Update on our preventative measures for COVID-19

Even after the tighter regulations of recent days, Favini paper production continues running as scheduled for the week.

The approved outcome of a recent audit in one of our mills, confirms that our people are working according to all the preventive measures.

How are the operations in Favini mill proceeding? Is there any relevant impact after the new and more restrictive measures?

On Saturday night, Italian Prime Minister Giuseppe Conte decided to keep open only factories producing essential goods. According to the list of facilities which are allowed to continue their activities, paper production will remain operational. This means that Favini will carry on the scheduled plan.

Even though the massive impact of Covid 19 has forced an exceptional change to our way of working, we are still focusing on delivering the best quality of service to you.

To protect the public health and well-being of our customers and employees, we have temporarily reorganized our activities as much as possible to a smart working regime, allowing us to be ready and flexible to meet your needs while operations are fully active.

On Wednesday 18, we received an audit from the dedicated authority at Rossano Veneto plant. The approved outcome of the inspection confirms that we are working respecting the extraordinary rules to fight against the spread of the virus. We hope that you appreciate our efforts.
